Written Testimony

Changing the zoning to allow accessory dwellings will not address the housing problem unless the Department of Planning and Permitting (DPP) has the power to enforce the laws regulating their use. Advertisements that offer residential units for short term occupation are in violation of ROH Chapter 21 unless they have a conditional use permit. If City Council is serious about providing more housing for locals, then Bill 20 should include a directive to DPP to monitor advertising and impose fines on owners who offer short term rentals in residential neighborhoods without having a conditional use permit.
