Feral cats certainly are an issue. However killing cats only dies what is called the "vacuum effect": more food and more space available for new cats. Trap Neuter and Return is the solution as cats are territorial and will prevent other cats to establish in a new spot. Plus it is a humane way proven to be effective (Australia) to fix the problem... finally and contrary to many saying: feral cats are not jeopardizing native birds population as long as the cats are fed and kept in a cat colony... why would they bother to spend time and energy to get a bird fir food while diner is provided... many scientific studies back up the fact that feral cats do not contribute to killing native birds. At the most they may go after easy pigeon/dove prey which are already considered as a nuisance...
