Subject: HART and Rail pricing concerns

1. Flat fee is not a fair pricing system as you could have a commuter in Kapolei (who also gets their choice of seat) paying the same price to downtown as someone who joins at the airport? Japan's rail systems run on a distance based system which seems to work very well. Even if you ride and purposely get off at a later stop you cannot exit until you pay the difference.
2. Senior pricing is an excellent idea, however currently "the bus" mandates that you be 65. Other US cities have the age set at 60-62 which should increase ridership. I am 62 and refuse to ride the bus because and pay the same as an 18 year old.

I appreciate you considering these ideas.
